Metastatic lesions of nasopharyngeal cancer result from hematogenous dissemination, but regional metastases may also occur. Metastatic lesions to distant organs (bone, lung, liver) are common and occur in 50% of patients, but local metastases may also be present. The site of metastasis has a prognostic value, and the presence of local metastases significantly reduces the patient's survival. Thus, the early detection of metastasis and the optimal treatment of primary tumor and metastasis are essential. This invention relates generally to accessories for musical instruments.
